Abstract
This study is to explore the relationship among individual traditionality-modernity, organizational relationship and Happiness in Taiwanese society. The literature review is used to build research framework. Afterward, there are 213 valid subjects, selected by convenient sampling from the full-time workers in the north, the midland , and the southern part of Taiwan, including Taipei City, Taoyuan County, Hsinchu County, Changhua County, Tainan City and County, Kaohsiung City and County, and Pingtung City and County. Individual Traditionality Scale, Individual Modernity Scale, Organizational Relationship Scale and Chinese Happiness Inventory were used in this study.
The research results show that: (1) the higher individual modernity employees have, the more organizational relationship and happiness they will have; (2) the higher organizational relationship employees have, the higher happiness they will have; (3) organizational relationship has mediating effect between the employees' individual modernity and happiness.
