Abstract Abstract
Due to the trend toward an advanced-age society in Taiwan and Japan has already been a venerable-age country.
From the sociology point of view, leisure activities are organized entertainment, which can be arranged.
To probe into the characteristics, similarities and dissimilarities for popularizing and improving leisure activities for the aged, the purpose of this study is a comparison in the items and contents of entertainment between the aged Taiwanese and Japanese in take-in shelter
The objects are focused on the aged in Kaoshiung city (Taiwan) and Shen Hu city (Japan). According to the patterns of take-in shelters, the objects are over 60 years and physically healthy; the institutions are 「Ren-Ai home for the aged 」 and 「care house Kobe」 as well 「Recuperate home –Da Ci Ji Xiang Yuan」 for reference.
The characters of this dissertation are an exploration and case study. For completing this study, the researcher adopts documental analysis, participate-observe method and depth interview to collect and analyze the data.
The results of this research are listed under:
(1) In Kaoshiung,「Ren-Ai home for the aged」 is the only one take-in shelter, which reveals that the public administration does not offer sufficient services for the aged
(2) Comparing to the four-series activities of the Japanese leisure institution, 「Ren-Ai home for the aged」 in Kaoshiung is focused on aged people's physical and emotional exercises, 「care house Kobe」 emphasizes in social activities and 「Recuperate home –Da Ci Ji Xiang Yuan」 stresses in social activities more.
(3) When planning, Japanese organization offers the activities from the needs both of the aged and the bringers while Taiwanese institution will do from the requirements of the providers.
