課程概述
課程目標	Accounting provides information managers need when making decisions. Financial accounting provides information to external managers while modern cost accounting yields insights into what managers and accountants do within an organization. We describe how management accountants provide financial and nonfinancial information to help managers decide how best to deal with challenges and opportunities.
課程大綱
英文大綱	CHAPTER 1:THE ACCOUNTANT’S ROLE IN THE ORGANIZATION CHAPTER 2:AN INTRODUCTION TO COST TERMS AND PURPOSES CHAPTER 3:COST-VOLUME-PROFIT ANALYSIS Chapter 3 presents the cost-volume-profit (CVP) analysis model. CHAPTER 4:JOB COSTING Chapter 4 describes the basics of a costing system by illustrating a normal job-costing system. CHAPTER 5:ACTIVITY-BASED COSTING AND ACTIVITY-BASED MANAGEMENT Chapter 5 emphasizes the allocation of indirect costs within a costing system. Companies need to accurately measure resources used in producing different products and providing different services. Tracing costs in an economically feasible way to products and services is not the difficult part of assigning costs. Allocating indirect costs provides the challenge. Companies produce an increasing variety of products and services and have ever-increasing amounts of indirect costs to allocate to them. A costing system provides managers with information

	for many different purposes, with one important purpose, accurate costs of products or services. CHAPTER 6:MASTER BUDGET AND RESPONSIBILITY ACCOUNTING CHAPTER 7、8:FLEXIBLE BUDGETS, VARIANCES,AND MANAGEMENT CONTROL Chapter 7、8 illustrates specific tools used by accountants for providing managers information for improved decision making. The tool developed from the assumptions and use of cost behavior in relation to volume found in cost-volume-profit analysis is that of the flexible budget.
