課程概述	The aim of this course is to help students familiarize with literary genres such as poetry, drama, fiction in British and American literature. Parts (Passages) of works, classical and modern, from each genre will be chosen for close reading and textual study. Another endeavour is directed toward building up students' ability to read, write, and present, though our main concern is focussed on literature.
課程目標	To introduce students to more artful prose with deeper cultural significance and personal depth than they are likely to encounter elsewhere in their education. Although I will lecture some about the history and development of the novel, as this is an "applied English" program, I will mainly use literary works to improve students vocabulary and understanding of "living" contemporary English.
